SPIRITUALISM.

To the Editors of the Intelligencer Will you permit a few words from seeker of "Truth," in regard to the "in seeker of "Truth," in regard to the "reteresting and wonderful narrative" published in your paper of the 24th inst, describing the spiritual experiences and investigations of Wm. Balley, Esq.:

As a practical man, I am more interested in results than in processes. I do not wish to undervalue the latter, but substitute a propring that their value is for ested in results than in processes. I do not wish to undervalue the latter, but submit it as a principle, that their value is to be estimated chiefly by the results they produce. Applying this principle to Mr. B's. communication with spirits, what do they amount to? Are we any wiser in regard either to the present or the future than before? One of the spirits congratulates Mr. B. on his having "seen the great soul light before his time on earth his ended." Will Mr. B. explain what is meant by that "great soul light?" Does it make him a wiser, or better man? Does it point out more clearly than the Bible his twhole duty as a man? Does it clear up the obscurities, or remove the difficulties, which, hader the wise and good mentod this age irom solving speedily the political and social problems of the century? I Mr. Balley is endorsed in the article, as a man "not inclined to take much on Faith," and his avowed object, therein rather estentiationaly represented, is to "seek trint and announce it." Now what truth has Mr. B. announced, either in his Washing. I ton Hall Lecture or in the article published? He leaves us to infer that he does, but the question is left in a doubtful non committal state, entirely out of character with that of a man who deliberately sets out to seek and announce truth, and take nothing on faith. Mr. B. makes no secret of the fact, as we are informed, that he has discarded the faith of his fathers, and of his youger days. What has he to offer himself and us, as a substitute? Does he advise us to write letters to the spirits, have them seated in the presence of Bank officers, and left for 24 hours with self constituted

Forthcoming Report of the Comp-troller of the Currency.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The Comp-troller of the Currency, in his forthcom-ing report, gives a history of the working of the free banking system in the country previous to the establishment of national previous to the establishment of national banks, and goes on to say that the amount of national bank notes now authorized to be issued is $354,000,000, and the amount of legal tender notes $356,000,000. So that the proportion of legal tender money in which national bank notes are now redeemable is nearly identical though alightly in excess. If the national banking law was amended so as to require the redemption of national bank notes at a ; of 1 per cent discount, as is the case in the New York State law, instead of at par, as provided in the national currency act, and the national banks of the whole country would agree to such a provision of law, the prompt redemption of national of law, the prompt redemption of national bank notes would be insured. But the bank notes would be insured. But the redemption of this vast amount of circulating notes, if redeemed but once a year, would result in a great loss to the people of the United States. A system of redemption of this kind would also at once increase the rate of exchange from the 1-10 of one per cent now, existing at most periods of the year between the different cities of the Union, to from a cent to 1 per cent, thus restoring to a considerable degree the condition of exchange at a time of the inauguration of the national banking system, and insuring a loss to the people annually of millions of dollars. Buch a system would, however, un-Such a system would, however, un-doubtedly result in a return of the otes of the national banks at certain notes of the national banks at certain seasons of the year, when they were not needed, to the vaults of country banks, to be paid out when the demand for currency has increased. And such a system would also give what is exceedingly desirable at the present time, elasticity to the currency. In order to insure prompt redemption of national bank notes, the worst season were has on much increased. amount assued must be so much increase amount issued must be so much increased that notes will be, say at one-eighth of one per cent discount, and this would probably be accomplished until an addition was made to the present circulation of $100,000,000. The same rule would follow from the reduction of the value of the property to the same rule would follow from the reduction of the value of the same rules simultaneously with the legal tender notes simultaneously with the legal tender notes simultaneously with the issue of bank notes, but Congress has refused to diminish the smount of legal tender notes. So that the Comptroller is of the opinion that any general system of free banking, accompanied with redemption, must be postponed until the resumption of specie payments. result in restoring high rates of exchange will also result in the downfall of a system of banking which it is believed will become the most satisfactory of any system ever established. During the past year, as far as his observation has extended, national bank notes have been rarely at any preceptible discounnt for legal tender notes, and during the late panic ho distinction was made by the people between the legal tender notes of the U.S. and national bank notes.
